

Jayden Skuladottir

Project Progress Log #3

Research: Still incomplete, doing schoolwork has been particularly difficult the past few weeks due to mental setbacks. But I do not have much left and I know I can finish everything on time.

Self-Reflection: I found a few more terms and worked a bit on adding descriptions of them. It is a little difficult to describe the exact emotion that these terms are trying to convey, especially since they can be used in various contexts.

Deliverable: My site is beginning to come along in terms of style. It still has a lot of content missing because I have been putting it off. It's a lot harder to translate my notes into a comprehensive article than I anticipated it to be.

All content for my project can be found on my GitHub repository:

jaydenskula/empathyandtechnology.final.project: Final Deliverable for E&T \(github.com\)

Time: I have spent about 3 hours this week on my project. I finalized the questions for my survey, created it and released it on April 16th. As of right now, it has received 60 responses. I plan on closing the poll in a few days so I will have time to create visualizations in Tableau and to analyze the results. I spent some time styling my website and I began preparing a presentation for the class.

Checkpoints: My next checkpoint is April 27th. By April 27th I want all content on my site and I want my site to be styled and interactive.

To-Do: I need to get all my research content onto my site. I have two more studies to read about and write notes on. Lastly, I need to close the survey soon so I can create visualizations and analyze the results.