Project Progress Log #1

Research:

I haven't made much progress with my research. I have gathered sources; however, I still need to take notes.

Self-Reflection:

I've made more progress on the self-reflection portion of my project than I anticipated. As of right now, I have discovered about 10 new terms and phrases from online communities.

Deliverable:

I have the GitHub repository and the general page organization of my final deliverable set up. I plan on having a site and using Tableau to create visualizations of the data that I gather in the next few weeks.

Time:

I spent about 2 hours on my project this past week. I started brainstorming the questions I possibly want on my questionnaire for my mini study and how I possibly want to approach getting participants. A bit of time was spent perusing through some posts online in an attempt to find some unique phrases and "words" used by people in online communities which I wrote down as I found them. I also began creating my site.

Checkpoints:

I had a checkpoint on March 30th. I did not complete the milestones by the checkpoint because I completely forgot that I made a checkpoint this soon. This is partially due to Spring Break. Also, I forgot to write the checkpoint date down in my planner so it was not on my mind.

TO-DO:

- Complete research and notes
- Continue adding terms to the emotional granularity list and begin adding descriptions
- Begin putting content onto a webpage
- Complete the questionnaire and make it public

My next checkpoint is April 11th. Since I missed the first checkpoint, I am going to try to complete the milestones for both my first and second checkpoints by next week.
